According to the Anti-Defamation League, anti-Semitic incidents in America surged by nearly 60% in 2017, including the “Unite the Right” rally in Charlottesville, Virginia and four documented cases in Maine. The accused mass-murderer at the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh was likely motivated by racism and anti-Semitic ideology. More recently, President Trump accused Jews of “disloyalty” for voting for Democrats and Rep. Ilhan Omar (MN) was widely condemned for similar remarks about allegiance to a foreign state. How did we get here? What’s going on? And what can we do to eliminate hate from our public life?

Join us for a panel discussion on anti-Semitism and American politics over a free home-cooked (vegetarian) meal at the Wilson Center on College Ave.
